OCEAN WEEK!

Something Fishy

by Emma J.

Did you ever think you could wear a fish? Well, Edison made it possible.

At Edison we did fish printing (originally fish slapping). We covered the fish in black ink. We held our items, like T-shirts or pillow cases, over the fish, then we pressed them over the fish, and then we painted them with other colors, and then, and then, and then, never mind, you probably have a shirt like that.

The Hat Parade

by the Light Bulb Staff

You probably never thought you could wear a habitat on your head. And what were all those people doing walking around school with hats on their heads anyway? It was the Habitat Hat Parade.

Every grade had different hats, based on the habitat they studied. The students had made them before the parade. On Wednesday, April 22, the parade went all around the school and ended in the cafeteria. The all-school sing was after the Habitat Hat Parade.

Editorial: Chocolate is NOT a Vegetable

by Margaret C.

In a past issue it was argued that chocolate is a vegetable because it comes from beans, which it does, and that beans are vegetables, making chocolate a vegetable. This is misinformation! Actually, beans are fruit, therefore making cacao beans fruit, making chocolate the best fruit ever! That brings me to sugar beets, which are made into sugar, therefore, because beets ARE vegetables, sugar is a vegetable. So when you are eating chocolate and your parents tell you to stop because you're going to spoil your dinner, tell them you are just eating your fruits and vegetables and explain to them that chocolate comes from beans, which are fruit, and sugar comes from beets, which are vegetables, therefore you are eating your fruits and vegetables.
